

Making the Grade (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Making the Grade Every individual has an inherent desire to win. Ask the boy, the girl, the youth, the maiden, or the middle-aged what of the future. Every one will tell you that he expects to reach his goal, that he expects to sail into the harbor of old age with a competency and with his hopes realized. Alas! however, the possibilities of this achievement grow dim with the passing years, and fully eighty-five per cent of the worlds populace reach the sear and yellow time of life with the howl of the wolf dangerously near! This human waste is a serious economic problem. It indicates that our system is wrong somewhere. Is it in our boasted educational institutions? Are we training wrong? Sometimes I think we are.
