A woman in Wales has her mind destroyed by a scientists attempt to enable her to see the god of nature Pan. Years later, a young woman named Helen Vaughan arrives in the London social scene, disturbing many young men and causing some to commit suicide; it transpires that she is the monstrous offspring of the god Pan and the woman in the experiment. The Great God Pan is a novella written by Arthur Machen. A version of the story was published in the magazine Whirlwind in 1890, and Machen revised and extended it for its book publication (together with another story, The Inmost Light) in 1894. On publication it was widely denounced by the press as degenerate and horrific because of its decadent style and sexual content, although it has since garnered a reputation as a classic of horror. Machens story was only one of many at the time to focus on Pan as a useful symbol for the power of nature and paganism. The title was taken from the poem A Musical Instrument published in 1862 by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, in which the first line of every stanza ends ... the great god Pan.
